Weekend College Coming Spring Quarter

In response to a recent survey of approximately 18,000 residents of Beaufort, Hyde, Tyrrell and Washington counties, Beaufort County Community College will initiate weekend college this spring. Seventy-four percent of the survey respondents indicated that offering weekend classes should be a priority at BCCC.

Dr. David McLawhorn, Dean of Instruction

BCCC will offer a variety of curriculum courses, including college transfer, vocational and computer courses, on Friday evenings and Saturdays. Dr. David McLawhorn, Dean of Instruction, said the program is intended to better accommodate the needs of working students who cannot attend classes during the week. “We know that there is a demand for weekend classes, and we hope to begin to meet this demand through this program. If enrollments are adequate and funding is available, we intend to broaden the weekend college program in the fall,” he noted. The Division of Continuing Education will continue to offer weekend courses as they have in the past. Registration for all weekend courses will be held at the first class meeting.

Endowments Established at BCCC

The Jehu Archbell Endowed Teaching Chair in Business Programs, and the Harry Archbell Endowed Teaching Chair in College Transfer Programs, have recently been established at Beaufort County Community College. These are the first teaching chairs to be established at the college.

Both endowments have been contributed to the college by Washington Attorney John Archbell Wilkinson in memory and honor of his uncles. Each $25,000 endowment will be used to provide instructors in Business and College Transfer programs. These instructors may be invited to the

Continued on page.....3

THIS ISSUE

Operation 10,000 ................................................Page 4
Success Circle ......................................................Page 6
Henson Goes Irish ................................................Page 7
Thanks, BCCC ......................................................Page 10